KANCO participated in the cost of hunger in Africa (coha) study launch on the 21 September 2019 at the KICC, Nairobi. The study sought to estimate the social and economic costs and implication of hunger on health, education and labor productivity. This was towards generating evidence for the need to increase investment in nutrition and to recommend actions to inform and support the concept of human capital gain that will catalyze implementation of Kenya’s big four agenda and vision 2030 as well as caution on the cost of inaction in addressing hunger and malnutrition.

Addressing the delegates during the launch Cabinet secretary of the National Treasury Hon. Ukur Yatani stated, “The cost of child undernutrition to our economy is Ksh. 373.9 billion, which represents a loss of 6.9 percent of our GDP as at 2014.” This loss to the GDP is equated to the revenue allocated to the Forty-Seven (47) County Governments in Kenya in 2019/20 financial year. He reiterated the government’s commitment to end hunger and strengthen the health systems stating “Kenya has undertaken the COHA study for empirical evidence that will go a long way in complimenting the government’s commitments in fighting hunger and related health challenges.”

In a speech read by the Cabinet Secretary for Health Sicily Kariuki, on behalf of President Uhuru Kenyatta, the President stated “The study touched on two pillars in our Big Four Agenda, Food and Nutrition and Universal Healthcare, a clear indication on the relevance of the study to our key priority policy objectives and the long term development goals.” The president reiterated on the government’s commitment to ensuring that the constitutional provisions in article 43 and 53 are met that stipulate the right to be free from hunger and every child having a basic right to nutrition respectively. He added that Kenya was on course in addressing stunting from 33% in 1994 to 26% in 2014 stating “As a Government, we are committed to reducing the stunting rates to 14.5% by 2030, I call upon the County Governments to formulate and develop specific policies based on the recommendations stipulated in the study report and implement them seamlessly with the goal of achieving our health-estimating that about 4.4 percent of Kenya’s population suffered from depression in 2015, with half of those committing suicide being the youth. It is also estimated that 1 out of every 4 Kenyans suffers from a mental health illness at some point in their lives. Compounding mental health challenges is stigma, the criminal justice system that looks like attempted suicide as a criminal offence and the gap in the health care systems as well as policy implementation.

The Conference sought to push for the: Official launch and implementation of the WHO sponsored Quality Rights Initiative in Kenya; Proper utilization of the Kenya Mental Health Policy (2015-2030) by relevant stakeholders; Alignment of the Kenya’s mental health policy with national frameworks such as Vision 2030, Kenya Health Policy, Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) and the Global Mental Health Action Plan; Fitting mental health into Kenya’s Universal Health Care (UHC) agenda; Address of

Communication hacks for Social Media

Social media is emerging as the next frontier for communication, given its wide usage and reach. It has become part of the everyday organizations work and lives creating alternative and reliable channels to amplify the organizational work. It has also become an important gateway to fundraising by profiling the organizational brand when used efficiently.

Things to Consider:
- Identify who we are trying to reach
- What do we want them to do?
- Communicate how success will look like
- Understand what else is happening on the internet to effectively position yourself
- Use a relatable voice: simple easy to understand language, play to the emotion to nudge people to take action
- Think about who will need to sign this off
- Evaluate the likely impact
- Measure against yourself (For example see your retweets, shares, hearts, commentary, tone, topic followers earned or lost) and against others, see what they are doing better than you and learn

Quality of Voice
- Use an empowering voice—the ability to take action and make impact, to be part of a bigger whole
- Use a steady voice—be firm and hopeful
- Principled—Communicate organizational values, that represents who we are, what we do and why we do it
- Respectful—speak truth to power and always be respectful to institutions
- Inclusive—Never create divides ‘We’ vs. ‘Them’ instead communicate as “We are them”
